

Occupational Health and Safety in Small Business is a WorkSafe course developed by WorkSafeBC (the Workers' Compensation Board of B.C). It aims at helping small business owners to understand their legal responsibilities and to exercise due diligence in their workplace. This course is also suitable for worker health and safety representatives, supervisors, and workers in small operations.

The course consists of five modules:

Responsibilities for OH&S/ Due Diligence	OH&S Program Overview	Accident Investigations and Reports	Assessment Rates and Claims Costs	WCB Officer Functions
---	--------------------------	---	--------------------------------------	--------------------------

Successful completion of the course will enable participants to:

- Explain regulatory requirements relevant to responsibilities of employers, supervisors, workers, and others
- Identify the elements of an OH&S program and key factors in the practice of due diligence
- Apply strategies to manage claims and control costs
- Understand the roles and functions of WCB officers and cooperate with them to achieve compliance with regulatory requirements and workplace health and safety
